DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This low-rise common bond brick residence features a cantilevered entrance canopy. Rectangular, vertical windows offset the flat, horizontal "L Plan" building design.

The short axis forms the left section of the house. On the right side a horizontally rectangular white panel is mounted by a narrow, vertically rectangular casement light which is capped by a much smaller light. To the right is a white panel competing large rectangular grouping. The upper and lower sections are separated by a band of molding. A simple frieze accents the flat roof.

The long axis contains <sup>above the</sup> the cantilevered entrance. Located on the far left side of the facade, it holds a blue rectangular door complemented by a wide, rectangular fixed glass panel to the left. A concrete stoop continues the extended lines of the canopy.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The flat roof, <sup>and</sup> cantilever windows with minimal exterior reveals of this house are derivative of the International Style.

Most popular in the 1920's, ~~though the style has lost its popularity,~~ modern architectural design is greatly indebted to it, ~~though the style~~ <sup>has lost its popularity.</sup>

A similar house stands on the 3700 block of Denison Street.
